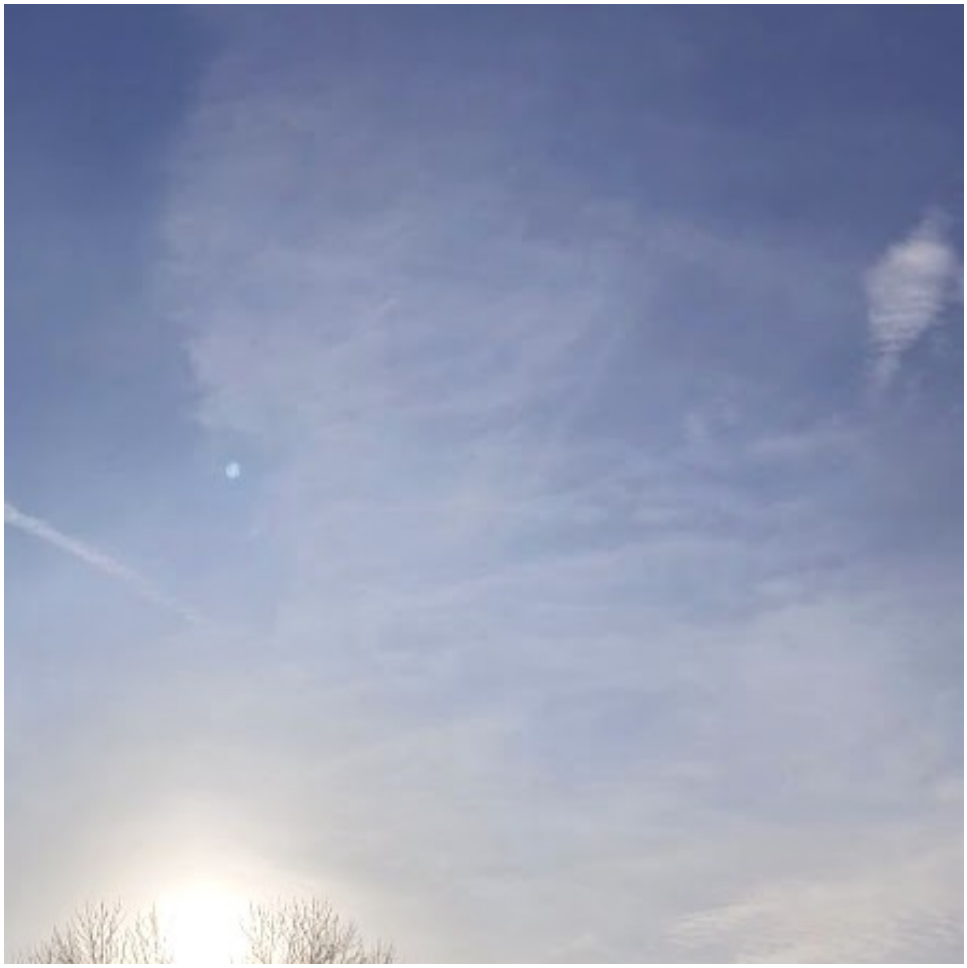
It Didn’t Need To Be Clear

It started
to form—

not all at once,
not completely.

Just enough
to catch
your attention.



You didn’t need
the whole shape.

You didn’t need
certainty.

What you saw
was enough.

It didn’t need
to be clear
to be seen.